MANY OBJECTIONS MADE

$1,712,026 Spent in Luzerne
County Out of A State
Total of $9,000,000

HARRISBURG, June 15—Bitter clashes between opposing counsel today marked the opening of the fourth day in the trial of Roy E. Brownmiller, secretary of highways in the administration of former Governor George H. Earle, on charges of misconduct in office.

Francis Fitzgerald, Scranton, assistant construction engineer for the state highway department and the first fieldman called to the witness stand by the prosecution, testified that when he inspected highway projects in Luzerne County he observed that some men worked with tools "and some did not."

His reply to Prosecutor Earl V. Compton's questioning was repeatedly halted by objections from Judge H. O. Bechtel, counsel for the former Democratic cabinet official. Fitzgerald testified that the Luzerne County roads "generally needed attention" at the time of his inspections in Pennsylvania in 1938. Asked how road conditions were after November 8, Fitzgerald said that "about 40% of the highways (in Luzerne County) were bad." Briefly, Assistant Highway Controller Edward R. Dietrich testified that $1,712,026 was spent on Luzerne County out of a total of approximately $9,000,000 for the entire state for the last fiscal year.

The prosecution contends that Brownmiller permitted the padding of the highway payroll in Luzerne County in an effort to aid the Democratic party in its unsuccessful campaign last fall to remain in power.

Mrs. Bruce Gilliard
Entertained By Friends

Miss Margaret Fox, 333 Radcliffe street, entertained friends at her home last evening in honor of Mrs. Bruce Gilliard, 631 Cedar street.

The affair was a surprise farewell party for Mrs. Gilliard and the evening was spent playing bridge. Prizes were awarded the winners. At a late hour, a delicious lunch was served in the dining room. A bouquet of cut flowers decorated the center of the table. The guests attending present a beautiful pocketbook and pair of gloves to Mrs. Gilliard.

Participants were: Misses Marion Harrison, Gertrude Murphy, Alice Keating, Helen Arnold, Isabel and Miriam Nils; Mrs. Edward Priestley, Mrs. Gilliard.

GUEST OF AUNT

Miss Doris Moore, Pond street, was a Saturday guest of her aunt, Mrs. Albert Lawrence, Burlington, N. J. Miss Moore also attended the wedding of her cousin.

Speaker Stresses
Importance of Loyalty

DOYLESTOWN, June 15—Addressing the weekly dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown here last night, Judge William F. Dannenbower, of the Montgomery county courts, pointed out the importance of being loyal to your profession or business, no matter what it might be.

He stated that "I liked to call the plays as I see them from the bench, and if we as judges make mistakes, it is a mistake of the head and not of the heart."

Judge Dannenbower said that he liked criminal court better than any other; that he was known as a "softy" to first offenders, and as a "hard-boiled" jurist to second-offenders, whom he has the reputation of giving the limit.

William Thomas Symington has been named respondent in a divorce action brought by his wife, Nivena VanSant Symington, on grounds of desertion. They were married in 1911 in Trenton, N. J., in St. Paul's Church. The last known address of the respondent was Lewisburg. The libellant lives at Washington Crossing, Upper Makefield township.

Hostess To A Number
Of Her Friends at Party

Marie Cherubini, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Cherubini, 513 Bath street, was hostess Monday evening to a number of her friends at her home in honor of her 15th birthday anniversary.

Games were played and refreshments served. The dining room was decorated in yellow. A birthday cake with candles formed the centerpiece on the table. Marie received many gifts.

Those attending: Ruth Watson, Jane Brownlee, Madeline and Claire McCole, Jane Townsend, Viola Monus, Marie and Theodora Cherubini, Karl Townsend.

Teacher Given Dinner
Upon Her Retirement

DOYLESTOWN, June 15—Starting with a salary of $40 a month as a school teacher nearly half a century ago, Miss Margaret Rice, of this place, was given a testimonial dinner last night by the faculty and friends of the Lansdale public schools, where she taught since 1906. The dinner marked her retirement from the teaching profession.

The dinner was arranged by the Lansdale Teachers' Association at which time the honored guest was presented with several fine gifts. A fine tribute was paid to Miss Rice by Ralph R. Smith, supervising principal of the Lansdale schools.

Miss Rice, born in 1869, became a teacher at the age of 19 in a little red school house in Hilltown township, Bucks county, in 1888. She taught in one Lansdale school for $40 a month.

Teacher vs. Pupil

(By "The Stroller")

One of the fair members of the faculty of Hulmeville public school hurried back to school after having luncheon at home a few days ago.

"I have a 'date' to play marbles with one of the pupils," she explained.

We are told it is a frequent occurrence for the small boys and girls to arrange a game with their instructress, and one small boy put it thusly: "She's a good marble player. But she doesn't shoot like the rest of us."

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

County Agent William F. Greenwalt today announced that a meeting of the West Rockhill 4-H Club will be held on Friday, June 16, at eight o'clock, D. S. T., at the home of Joseph Moyer.

Although the nature of the entertainment was not revealed, it was explained that Mrs. Moyer, the hostess, expects members to provide themselves with pencil and paper. A surprise program has been prepared.

During May, Miss Maude L. Wagner, rural school Red Cross nurse for middle Bucks county, made 299 visits and traveled 1396 miles.

The dental clinics have been completed for this school year. The nine-month schools will be closed by the first week in June.

Follow-up work in the homes to advise parents of the importance of corrections of physical defects is still being carried on by the nurse and dental fees are being collected at the same time.

Miss McQuillan paid a visit to the nurse.

Miss Wagner's activities were listed as follows: Health services: pre-school visits, 11; school visits, 141; adult visits, 13; visits in behalf of nursing service, 28; in behalf of general activities, 8; social service visits, 1; had 97 conferences with teachers and 12 pupil conferences; 9 dental clinics were held with an attendance of 66; attended one committee meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Trego, of Pebble Hill road, received the thrill of their lives and today they are considering themselves really lucky.

When a powerful bolt of lightning struck during a very welcome thunder shower, a large tree on the Trego place was hit. The bolt glanced off and struck the Trego house, shattering four panes of glass on the southeast corner of the dining room, passed through the room, filling it with smoke and sulphur and knocked out four more panes on the opposite side of the room. The radio and telephone in the path of the bolt, were put out of commission.

Request "G"-Men Aid

Philadelphia, June 15—The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called upon once more to enter investigation of Philadelphia's insurance-murder ring. This time the G-men were asked to "bring in" Mrs. Providenzi Micchile, 51-year-old fortune dealer and fugitive. She is charged with "homicide by poisoning." In the death of Pietro Piroli, Federal agents also are reportedly looking for Mrs. Josephine Sadita and her husband, Joseph, in connection with the same death.

Meanwhile, the homicide squad was said to be working on the theory that a "central organization" was behind 100 poison slayings attributed to the ring.

May Extend Food Stamps

Washington, June 15—The government is considering extending its food stamp plan, now being used in Rochester, N. Y., and Dayton, Ohio, to direct surplus food stuffs to the nation's needy.

Stating the food stamp idea has shown "progress" during the first month in operation, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Harry Brown told a meeting of National Retail Dry Goods Association representatives the method might be applied to reduce the cotton surplus.

Phillip Maguire, vice-president of the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, also said officials are "very encouraged" by the program to date of the food stamp plan.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Not Quite Civilized

Washington, June 14.

ONE of the least lovely traits prevalent among the scintillating young policymakers of the New Deal's inner circle is revealed in their habit of retailing private conversations to New Deal journalists who promptly print them in such a way as to reflect great credit upon the New Deal conversationalists but none whatever upon the party of the second part.

IT IS a habit not calculated to endear them to the average man and one from which various business and financial leaders have suffered not a little. There have been one or two recent cases of such nature as to justify the feeling among the victims that there is a certain type in this Administration with which it is unsafe to have any personal contact whatever. The ordinary rules of courtesy and consideration observed among men generally seem not to apply to these Presidential intimates, some of whom are in positions of real importance.

FOR example, some months ago an intimation was received by certain well-known New York businessmen that it might be a good thing all around if through personal contact with the New Dealers better mutual understanding could be promoted. Responding to this suggestion a private dinner was arranged in New York and a very pleasant evening had. The New Dealers characteristically did most of the talking, but there was no friction, no important conclusions reached or views pro-

Annual Commencement Exercises To Be Held Tonight in South Langhorne Casino

WILL PRESENT PROJECT

LANGHORNE, June 15—The 44th annual commencement exercises of the Langhorne-Middletown high school will be held tonight in the Casino at South Langhorne, beginning at eight o'clock. There are 43 members in the class.

The project to be presented by the graduates in entitled, "Vocation Preferences in Langhorne-Middletown High School and their Implications."

Following the precedent established in 1931 the present graduating class selected a topic of local and immediate interest. For many years the questions of vocational guidance and vocational education have loomed large in the minds of all who are concerned with the future of youth. Conditions since 1929 have heightened this concern and made many conscious a never before of the need for a searching inquiry into the methods by which young people select their vocations and prepare for them.

The disquieting results of surveys conducted in other parts of the country led us to make a preliminary survey in the Langhorne-Middletown High School. Sufficient significant material was found which seemed to warrant further study.

Real Estate Board
Discusses Several Topics

The Bucks County Real Estate Board met last night in the Community House in Langhorne, at which time dinner was served to 17 members. The Board then went to the office of Paul Townsend, due to the fact that the Community House was to be used for another purpose.

The meeting was presided over by President Thomas Stockham, Morrisville. Mr. Stockham took charge of the business session. Reports were heard from the different committees. The main report was given by Charles Heyer, who is chairman of the Building and Loan Committee. Mr. Heyer gave a good report concerning all the building and loan associations in the county. There were 30 in 1930, and there are still 30 at the present time. He also compared them, showing the condition and strength then and now. This report will be sent within the next few weeks to all building and loan associations in the county.

Several members attended the Atlantic City convention last month, and they reported on the convention. John Wright, Newtown, reported that Boy Scout Lester Engle, of the Andalusia troop, won the contest for a trip to the World's Fair. The Board awarded him $15 as the writer of an essay entitled "Why I Like Bucks County." The annual picnic to be held in July was then discussed. It was decided to hold the picnic at the home of Mrs. Otto Grupp, Sr., Eddington.

After the business meeting a discussion of various topics was in charge of Richard Fechtenburg. Yesterday being Flag Day, a quiz was held as to the etiquette of the flag. Twenty-five questions were asked. Following the quiz a debate was held as to the advisability of a sales tax. The debate was won by the affirmative side. The meeting then adjourned.

BRISTOL AVIATOR
TELLS OF BATTLES
IN AIR IN SPAIN

Capt. John B. Wilson Recounts
Experiences of The Conflict

SERVED SIX MONTHS

Passport Had Been Faked, and
He Was Rechristened With Spanish Name

Herewith is presented an interesting story about a resident of Bristol, who as an aviator for six months in he recent war in Spain, had many thrilling experiences. The story is about Captain John B. Wilson, now manager of the Dunlop store on Mill street. Captain Wilson formerly resided in Delanco, N. J.

Captain Wilson graduated from Michigan State in 1931, had four years of R. O. T. C. training while here, coming out with a second lieutenant's commission. He also played three years of varsity football there, being listed in 1930 by the Chicago press as honorable mention for All-American halfback. He received an appointment to the Air Corps branch of West Point at Randolph Field, Texas, served the training course there and then graduated from Kelly Field, Texas, as a military pilot in 1934. After traveling extensively in the Orient and Europe, as a tourist, he accepted a position as commanding officer of a CCC camp in New York State. He now holds the title of Captain in the Reserve Corps, and makes his home in Asbury Park, N. J., when not at his place of business here.

By Cap't John B. Wilson

When the Spanish civil war broke out back in 1936, it was not clear in my mind what each side was fighting for. After the heroic defense of the Alcazar, I was inclined to favor the Rebels. However, after learning that tri-motored Junker Bombers had devastated Madrid, I knew Hitler had designs on some future Spanish influence. It became common knowledge, also, that foreign infantry and airmen were invading Spain. For this reason, I decided to offer my services to the Spanish Government.

From my home here in Delanco, New Jersey, I wrote to the Spanish Ambassador explaining my desire to fly a combat ship for his government—which was politely rejected. A similar letter to the same office in Mexico City brought a reply to report at once and sign a contract. After signing this document, I was rechristened Francisco Trejo Olvideado and sent to the Consul General's office in New York. Here I was interviewed by an attorney and given a faked Spanish Passport and expense money. I sailed the next afternoon for LeHavre on the Normandie. Prior to sailing, the attorney had me practice my new name on paper for half an hour so I would not absent-mindedly write J. B. Wilson at the pier.

Thanks to Professor Shont of M. S. C., I knew enough Spanish to get by the Custom officials. Although my lingo was rather slow, I attributed this to the fact that I have been in this country since childhood and could not speak my native tongue as I could years ago. Although I looked anything but Spanish, the Custom authorities seemed satisfied.

In LeHavre, the French officials were pretty keen and let me know in no uncertain terms what they thought of my "brass" in coming to LeHavre from New York on a faked passport. The other American flyers sailed via Mexico and had legal papers.

On June 1st I reported to the Spanish Agent in Paris, and was sent to the Spanish border that same afternoon after receiving a good supply of pesetas and francs. At the border the guard studied my passport and smiled as I was permitted to pass. It seemed that everyone who looked at my passport knew it to be faked. A shuttle train carried me to Port Boa where I witnessed my first bombing of a city. Throughout Spain, when Bombers are approaching, the siren warns all the people three or four minutes in advance. The populace then dash for the bomb-proof tunnels which are at convenient places. At this particular time the people came from everywhere and disappeared just as quickly. Being unfamiliar with this procedure, I stood in the doorway and just looked. In a few seconds I saw a trio of bi-motored Junker Bombers come over and head for the sea (Mediterranean). Just after they had passed, a geyser of dirt and stones erupted from the harbor. I later learned that their base was in the Balearic Isles and that they were frequent callers.

The Air-ministry which was in Valencia was an over-night trip, so I took the afternoon off and looked over the town which was very similar to Manchester, Michigan, where I have enjoyed several visits with Doug Watkins, a fraternity brother at Michigan. The natives of Port Boa were very congenial which reminded me of Manchesterites. That evening I was sent on to Valencia after bidding adios to my Catalonian official hosts.

After a very sedentary talk with the

SIX MONTHS OF CONGRESS

The only important legislation enacted at the present session of Congress, which began six months ago, has been appropriation bills, the government reorganization bill, the measure for national defense and that for reciprocal taxation of Federal and State salaries.

Congress has also extended the life of the Federal Housing Administration and that of the Export-Import Bank. It has killed the Townsend pension scheme and the Florida ship canal. It has given the Dies committee a further lease on life and taken steps to investigate operations of WPA.

Among the appropriation bills have been two deficiency ones for relief. In conference is the agricultural appropriations bill which includes parity payments to farmers and for additional surplus commodity purchases.

If this seems meager accomplishment, it must be remembered that the habit of Congress is to devote the first months of its session to what is sometimes termed spade work. Usually the mass of important legislation is acted upon during the last six weeks or two months of the session. If present plans hold Congress will adjourn about the middle of July.

Upon Congress' program are still these matters: Tax revision, social security revision, relief appropriations and reorganization, wage-hour amendments, national labor relations act amendments, new neutrality legislation, ratification of TVA purchases of public utilities, housing authority amendments, railroad reorganization, extension of dollar devaluation powers and stabilization fund.

Some of these measures are likely to become laws. Some others, facing vigorous opposition, are likely to be laid aside, if not defeated.

Among other proposed acts of legislation which are not now held to have much chance for enactment are: The measure to admit 20,000 refugee children from Germany and the former Czechoslovakia, jail for deportable aliens whom no country will receive and for aliens who advocate changes in forms of our government, taxation from income on new public bond issues, espionage in industry, increased pensions for families of war veterans, insurance of loans to small business, tax on chain stores.

Evidently the rush of the last days of Congress will be no different than in the past.

JUNE COLT BUDS

Of course, it must be admitted that June began in with utter disregard of the poets. The month started out in anything but a happy mood. But human mortal must be patient and forgiving, and perhaps soon he shall be rewarded. Any day now the month may redeem itself and prove that there is no day so rare as a day in June.

June is the month of rebirth of the things that grow out of the ground, vegetables and flowers, food for the body and joy for the soul. It is the month of the longest day of the year, the beginning of summer and vacation time, of awakening after long hibernation, of red roses newly sprung, of strawberries coming to sweet perfection on the plant, the month which inspires us to say with the poet, "Slower, sweet June, each step more slow, linger and loiter as you go."

"AIR MAIL BRIDE"

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXVI

Edward brought half a pie out of the cooler. It was a strawberry pie, rich and luscious. "She might have meant it for tomorrow's dinner," Marie put in shyly.

"Gosh, no," he said, "don't you know Pop never eats leftovers? How about some coffee?"

"Sweet!"

The pie was nearly gone by the time the coffee was ready, but that didn't matter. They finished the pie to the last crumb, drained the coffee pot.

"Who says we're not happy?" Edward asked.

Afterwards Marie wondered, resentfully, why their happiness should be so closely connected with money. When they had money they were happy, when they didn't, they weren't.

Mrs. Wilson took the forty dollars Edward gave her, without comment.

"Board money," he said, with a touch of pride.

His mother made no answer, and presently Edward said, "I know we owe you more than this. But we'll catch up."

Then she spoke. "I hope so," she said wearily. "Your father does all he can, but with Bee gone it's all too much for me. The insurance man was here, and the man from the electric store. I don't know what to tell them. I don't know what the Werners thought when they saw the ice-box go out. I don't see how I can hold up my head much longer."

Edward patted her on the back awkwardly. "Don't you worry, Mom. And for heaven's sake, don't start worrying about what the Werners are going to think. That's just one item we can scratch."

"That's what YOU say!" she cried fiercely. "And what do you know about it? You're never home. I am! And how do you think I feel—the car gone—the ice-box gone—and Bee—oh! She shouldn't have done it—she shouldn't have done it—she had no right—no right at all!"

No one knew how to comfort her. Once Edward could have done it, but not now.

Guiltily, they tiptoed away. Later Edward said: "Marie, honey, why don't you plan to go to the beach with your mother, the way she wants? You know how things are here, and really, I'd be happier if I knew that you were. Things can't go on this way."

She thought of the comfortable seaside cottage that Julie and Charlie would have. The quiet. The sunny sand. The warm, gently rolling surf. She thought of the easy life, a car again, and Charlie's well-lined pockets. Her mother curling her hair, generously pressing upon her boxes of powder, new lipsticks. . . .

It would only be for a month. Lots of wives leave their husbands for a month.

"What'll you do?" she asked.

"Well, I'll try and round up a few dollars. I can always do it around the pool hall, though you raised such a fuss about it I told Herb he'd have to get somebody else. And then I'll beat it back to the mountains. Of course it's too late to get the job I had before, at Blue Creek, but I know some fellows who have a big piece of land up at Humboldt. You know—I've had it in mind for ages—and if I have enough to put in my share—with my knowledge of engineering, in order to get the road work done, which is the biggest thing, at this stage of the game—why, I'll really be in the big money later."

She saw it all. The dark forest, the squirrels that scold from the trees. The birds that sing in the thickets. The white, rushing river, the little deep creeks in which trout live.

"Oh, Edward! I want to go, too!"

"Shucks, you wouldn't like it!"

"I would—I'd love it!"

"Well, I don't know how it would work out, but I can write to Davis and Red. If they're still willing to take me in as a partner, do you suppose you could borrow a little from Charlie? You know—you could ask him next month, when you're down there."

"But I'm not going down there. I'm going with you instead. I'll help you get the money, though—we'll get it some way!"

"Confound it, Marie, I think you mean it!"

"I DO mean it!"

It was unfortunate that Mrs. Wilson happened to come in at that moment. She hated to see them even with their arms entwined, and here they were, hugging, kissing, like lovers.

"Excuse me," she said awkwardly, backing out.

"Oh, hold on, Mom! You don't have to get out of your own house, do you! Wait a minute! I want to tell you something—Marie and I are figuring on going up to Humboldt!"

She looked at him a long moment. "You and Marie?"

"Sure!"

"I thought it was settled you were going to send her back to her folks!"

"Oh! Marie said. She took her hand from Edward's.

"I'm sorry," Mrs. Wilson said, "I guess I'm not as tactful as some. But Papa and I talked it over. We told Edward he'd have to send you back."

Marie's teeth were chattering. She was shaking from head to foot. "I'm sorry," she said to Edward, "I'm sorry if I seemed to force myself upon you on your mountain trip. I didn't understand that I was being shipped home. It's fortunate that I have a few dollars left to pay my way, after pawing my mother's wedding present, isn't it?"

"It is, indeed," said her mother-in-law.

Edward's face was livid. He took his mother by the shoulders, his strong fingers biting into her flesh. "If you weren't my mother—"

She met his angry eyes with hers, that had grown dull and sunken these past difficult weeks.

"If you weren't my son, I might pass harsh judgment upon you. You've broken my heart."

Mr. Wilson came in, chin up, ready for action.

"Now what's going on? Now what have you done?"

"Nobody's done anything," Edward said angrily, "and what's more, nobody's going to. Mom came to me with a suggestion to let Marie go south for a vacation. Told me she wasn't looking well, and I owed it to her health. Now she's let the cat out of the bag. You and she, the pair of you, are trying to railroad her out of my life. Well, you can't do it—where Marie goes I go—and where I go—"

His mother interrupted him. "Nobody minds about me, any more. The house we've kept for you, and made nice for you to bring your friends to all these years! And now—"

"Oh, Mom! You've got to understand that when you put Marie out, you put me out, too. She's my wife!"

"I'm your mother!"

"—Oh, forget it! I'm getting sick of it. It's getting so I can't come in to the house without running into a bomb!"

"Eddie! How can you SAY such things! You never would have—you never did say such things, before she came! Everybody said you were a mother's boy. Even those girls that kept ringing up—I never minded, because I knew that I'd brought you up right, and done everything I could for you. Why Ada said—"

"All right," Edward cried, "all right. Now you've got that off your chest, suppose you stop?"

"Eddie! You can't talk that way to me! I won't have it! And if you don't want Ada's name mentioned, I can tell you that it isn't only Ada. Your Aunt Jennie said the same thing. Yes she did! No, I won't stop! You haven't been yourself since she came! You know you haven't! Bee changed too. If it wasn't for her, Bee would be here now. It was her making up to Ritchie and worrying Bee, that made all the trouble. I know! I know whose fault it was! I told Papa—"

"You're talking about my wife."

"I don't care. You shouldn't have married her. How do I know you did marry her? You hear all kinds of things about those Hollywood marriages. You can't believe what you hear—and you were always easy to get taken in by a pretty face and—"

Poor Mr. Wilson looked sick. He said unhappily to Marie, who had waited, frozen, by Edward's side, "You mustn't mind mama. She hasn't been herself since Bee went. It's hard on a mother to lose a girl that way—"

She thought: If anyone else says "aren't yourself" I'll scream. But she was sorry for her. She put her hand on his arm. "Never mind, Mr. Wilson. We really are going away—it will be better then."

He turned away.

Mrs. Wilson was weeping loudly. The sight of her huddled, dowdy little figure, with its wisps of gray hair, her grief, brought unwilling tears to the girl's eyes. She went to the kitchen for the aromatic spirits of ammonia.

She thought, she's stupid and mean and she's brought everything on herself, and I oughtn't to care—I ought to walk right out this minute with Edward, and wire mother collect that we're coming.

But instead she mixed the drink it back, said, "Please drink it," and when the weeping woman refused to take it from her hands she passed it patiently to Edward—"See if she'll take it from you honey."

When the sobs had stopped a little, she turned to go upstairs. Old Mr. Wilson took her hand. He tried to say something, but no words came. She thought she was sorrier for him than anyone she had ever seen before.

But when she spoke of it hesitatingly to Edward later, he said, "Oh, don't be silly. Look what he did to Bee. If he didn't wreck her whole life it isn't his fault. He did his best. It isn't his fault that she had an ace in the hole with Zelda, and he's still mad as a hornet about the car, though she gave him twice what it was worth. Not that she deserves so much sympathy either. She acted like a moron all the way through. And look at me, I'm as bad. You married into a good-for-nothing family. I don't blame you for wanting to get out. I wouldn't blame you if you left me flat."

"I'll never do that," she promised. "And you'll really go up to Humboldt?"

"Didn't I say I would?"

"You slay me," he said. "You simply—slay me!"

Bristol Aviator Tells Of Battles in Air in Spain

Air-minister, I was sent to a field at Los Alcazares to prove my ability as a flier. This meant another train ride. By this time I was pretty tired of trains and was glad when I arrived at Los Alcazares. After a good meal and a nap, I was informed that the Major would ride with me for a flight check. After being issued a helmet, goggles, a leather coat, and lined boots, I went out to the hangar where I met Major Diaz. We took off in a Polish ship, a Cojo-Joven. This ship had an American motor and was very similar to the old Navy Corsair used by the U. S. Navy. After giving the Major everything I knew including my favorite maneuver, a series of snarls, the Major motioned toward the ground. When we landed, he embraced me and seemed quite pleased. I went aloft alone for an hour or two and "moseyed" around and then decided to look over this town. In Los Alcazares I went into the Vodka Cafe and met two or three other Americans who were in Spain for the same purpose as myself. I learned that we were to be stationed at Campo X and that three Englishmen were to be there also. One of the Americans was rejected in his flight check and had turned machine-gunner. The rest of us probably would be flying together.

Later, at Campo X, I became discouraged when I saw the ships were to fly—Hugh Breguet Bombers with hispano-sulza motors, and equipped to carry a 225-pound bomb under each wing. My heart lightened, however, when a Spanish interpreter informed me that these ships were used to drop propaganda behind enemy lines. Later on we were all called together and organized into squadrons, after which we began practice in formation flying. This is very important because each flyer has little oddities which must be known by his squadron brothers since all formations, both defense and offense, are expedited with precision.

A short time after we landed, a fleet of tri-motored Junkers came over accompanied by a couple of squadrons of Heinkel fighting ships. Three squadrons of Russians had attacked them and given them a terrific beating. The Russians dove on them in formation and shot down nine Junkers and Heinkels, but three Russian ships were lost.

Beginning the next morning we went on repeated missions across the front line bombing trains (transport), railheads, trenches, and anything to hold up enemy positions from advancing or receiving supplies. In retaliation our own positions were constantly the targets of the German Junkers and Rebel Flats.

One of the fiercest battles in which I was engaged was on December 18th. Our mission was to destroy a munitions dump about 60 kilometers behind the enemy line. A concentration was at this point in preparation for a big push. At this particular time we were flying Nieuports. These ships were exceptionally effective and handled very much like our F-4-B Navy fighter. We took off at dawn with some Russians who were huge, red-faced men and very good flyers.

We flew in a formation of V of V's, which is a large V composed of three ship V's, a leader and two wing-men. When we were about four or five kilometers beyond the front lines, there was some commotion high above us; then down came our escort, closely followed by six Italian Flats (fighting planes). When I looked again, our first patrol was nowhere in sight. They had clutched for the ground and headed home at top speed. A few Flats up above didn't come down to join the festivities. However, we were all of a sudden in a cloud of Junkers, Heinkels, and some of the new German Messerschmidts which cruised about 400 miles per hour. The six Rebel Flats engaged our first patrol on the left wing and for about an hour we fought until our machine guns ran out of ammunition. One of the American flyers who was flying on the left wing of my squadron had the whole tail of his ship shot off and bailed out. I later learned he was captured by Franco's forces. This was certainly a scramble! At first the planes were so thick, and traveling so fast, that side shots were all I could get. Finally I got behind a Flat and pumped bullets at him for about 20 seconds. When I pulled away, he was in a spin with a trail of black smoke pouring from his engine. This was my first positive victim. Before this fracas was over, however, I landed another Flat and ended the career of a German in one of the new Messerschmidts. When the rebels saw they were getting the worst of it, they turned tail and fled for the mountains. During this fracas, our bombers and six escorts slipped off and fulfilled their mission uninterrupted.

On another occasion a Russian and myself were sent across the lines to bomb and machine-gun an approaching column of Rebel Infantry. This advance was composed of three columns of highly mechanized pieces. We had just cleared the field when we saw three tri-motored Junkers coming out of a low layer of clouds to the North. They saw us climbing and apparently didn't like it because they dropped their bombs in the river and fled. We cruised along over the low lying clouds with very few glimpses of the ground below. Fortunately, we found an opening over the place we were supposed to bomb so down we went. We dropped our bombs at 600 feet and went the rest of the way with all four machine guns hammering away. The Italian troops were certainly in a bad way down there. They didn't seem to have any anti-aircraft guns and were without protection. They opened an ineffective fire on us with field guns, which was useless. We could see the poor devils scurrying through the mud as we came down, spraying them with bullets. I saw a truck go end over end through the air as a Russian friend let go with a bomb on a truck caravan.

By this time the column was completely demoralized. Rifles and belts were discarded to facilitate running. They tended to run in groups which made them an easy target. I spotted one especially large group in wild retreat. My first move was to maneuver to a down-wind position—the wind was blowing in the same direction they were running—and then push its nose over to a 60 degree dive. At that altitude, 1000 feet, the men looked like a mass of ants on the ground, even through my telescopic sight. At 700 feet I opened fire with one upper and one lower machine gun. By doing this I could see by the tracer bullets whether or not I was on the target. The stream of bullets was just ahead of the fleeing group, so I opened up with the other two guns and pulled the nose up a little. I could now see the men plainly. At this time they did the worst thing possible; they turned and ran in the opposite direction. I could see their dead-white faces swivel around, and at the sight of the plane, terror would make them still whiter. They tried to run at right angles, but it was too late. Already, they were falling like grain before a reaper. I pushed the rudder back and forth gently so the bullets would cover a wider area; then I pulled the stick gently, thus widening the swath. This was kept up until lack of gas and bullets forced us back home.

During my entire seven months in Spain, I had but two free week-ends which were spent in Madrid at the "Florida" Hotel. I saw Charlie Chaplin at the theatre in "Tempos Modernos"—"Modern Times"—with a senorita, "Dolores." During the performance, the building was bombed, and three of the upper stories blown off. The Florida Hotel was also bombed on my first visit there, and a corner was blown off right next to my room.

The espionage systems of both Rebels and Loyalists are very effective. On one occasion, after receipt of a new shipment of planes from Moscow, Captain LaCalle, the Russian Commander, ordered the planes lined along the edge of a new field for the night. That evening this new field was bombed, and it so turned out that Captain LaCalle had the ships transferred to another field shortly after dark. The spies in the government ranks had sent a message that the ships would be on this particular field as Captain LaCalle had ordered; thus the bombing that night. Government spies had found out from rebel territory that the new ships on this field were to be bombed; hence Captain LaCalle moved them to another field.

The Germans were by far the best trained pilots in Spain, but their equipment was not so good. Had they been flying better equipment that war would have been over sooner. Some of the rebels couldn't seem to stand up under fire. Whether it was lack of incentive I do not know, but they always seemed to take the easiest way out of a situation.

When the end of my contract was near at hand, I was informed by the Regional Commander that I might take two weeks off for a rest, prior to the termination of my contract, so I put into Valencia for a week and spent another at Madrid. Both these cities were lively and a good place to relax. When my vacation ended, I returned to the pilots house in Alcalá to say good-bye. All my flying mates were sent farther back, and a large number of dummy planes were placed on the fields which Franco's men bombed daily. Thousands of dollars were wasted by bombing these dummies. The next morning I took a train to Port Boa on the French-Spanish border. I had no trouble getting past the Spanish officials, but on the French side I ran into difficulties. The French guards had the crust to suspect that I was not as Spanish as my passport said I was.

I was turned over to the French Police and taken to Perpignan to appear before the Prefect. It so happened that the Prefect's wife was an American; and, with her help, I was able to convince him that I was a real Spaniard, and he gave me a safe-conduct pass. My trip home was uneventful. When I arrived in New York, a State Department official picked up my passport from the purser and then cornered me. He asked me many questions—mostly military. I told him I had been shell-shocked and that I might throw a fit if he persisted in reviving horrible memories. He fell for it and let me off.

The seven months I spent in Spain were the most exciting and interesting during my life. I have tried to include the most interesting events in this brief synopsis and writing it has been relieving it.

nounced, and the Administration men went back to Washington after many expressions of regard and appreciation.

NATURALLY, it came as something of a shock to their hosts when a few days later they found in the newspapers more or less accurate accounts of the dinner in which the names of those present were given, the surroundings described and the menu detailed. In addition, a highly colored version of the conversation was presented, in which the New Deal economists were depicted as having overwhelmingly bested the men of industry and finance in arguments. By sharp and apt retort they drove home their points and forced the aforesaid men of industry and finance to admit that they had not been "co-operating properly" with the Administration and that most of the troubles in the nation were really due to the greed and lack of intelligence in the business world.

THIS INSTANCE, which occurred a good many months ago, is by no means the only one of the kind. In every case the suggestion of a private "get-together" talk has come from Administration sources. In every case it has been cordially responded to by the business and financial men approached and in nearly every case the details of the dinner, including names and conversation, have quickly followed in print. In these published stories, the New Dealers are invariably shown either as having administered a well-deserved rebuke to the businessmen, or by the unanswerable nature of their arguments persuaded them that "co-operation" is the better course, or by sheer personal charm, wit and wisdom, convinced the hard-boiled men of industry and finance that instead of wild-eyed radicals, these particular New Dealers actually are sound, sensible, personable and patriotic men. The point has now been reached where these printed accounts include the smart little anecdotes by which the New Dealers bring the affair to a happy end with a general laugh.

FROM the standpoint of those who play the part of hosts on these occasions, these publications are somewhat discouraging. While they say they are not accustomed to having the conversation at private dinner parties reported in the press and such publicity does not make for freedom of communication, nevertheless there is not the least objection on their part to such publicity, provided it is an accurate reflection of the facts. What they do feel less than enthusiastic about is the singular uniformity with which these accounts paint the young New Dealers as sapient, witty, clever and tolerant, contrasted with the narrowness, ignorance and general stupidity of the hosts.

WHAT really puts the "slow burn" on these gentlemen is to read in the papers not only words they did not utter to anyone but words which were not uttered to them at these little dinners. However, there isn't a thing in the world they can do about it. The publicity, while clearly coming from the New Deal source, is so framed that a demand for correction would be absurd. To protest would be merely to present another opportunity to pillory the host as a pompous ass. Though it is consistent with basic New Deal policy to place business in a bad light, this does not seem a very civilized performance. It, perhaps, explains why these New Deal representatives are so seldom invited twice by the same people.

Big Sales Event To Be Held By Merchants Here

The sale will begin Friday morning and last through Saturday. This was done so that out-of-town shoppers will have an opportunity to take advantage of the outstanding dollar values.

In another section of today's Courier will be found the advertisements of the co-operating business houses. Every item of every establishment invites your attention.

Every possible type of merchandise is being offered at the specially marked price of one dollar for these two days. Some of the items normally are sold for almost double that price. Following the sale, however, the prices will again be placed at their former figure.

Coming as it does, in vacation time, the dollar days will be ideal for those who are planning vacations. Hundreds of vacation needs will be found at reduced prices. But whether a vacation is in store or not, many of the items you will want because of the special price.

Among those merchants of the Association who have made this sale possible are the following members: Spencer's Furniture Store, Pal-Mar Cut Rate, The Auto Boys, Straus Cut Rate, Moffo's Shoe Store, Smith's Model Shop, Popkin's Shoe Store, Marty Green's Army & Navy Store, Wilson's Hardware Store.

Morrisville Couple Recall Bygone Days

ford Township, in 1862, while his wife, formerly Miss Mary Gulden, was born near Gettysburg, in Cumberland County, in 1863, until 1886, when they moved to Carlisle. Residents of Carlisle until 1897, Mr. and Mrs. Wagner then moved to York until 1913, when they moved to Trenton.

On June 8, 1882, they were married in York Springs, Pa., at the Lutheran parsonage. The couple then moved to South Middleton Township, in Cumberland County, in 1863, until 1886, when they moved to Carlisle. Residents of Carlisle until 1897, Mr. and Mrs. Wagner then moved to York until 1913, when they moved to Trenton.

Mr. Wagner, after a life of farming as a youngster, has had many jobs in various fields. In Carlisle he was a builder of stock and freight railroad. He was foreman of a railroad gang, insurance man, furniture employee, cabinetmaker, finisher and dairyman. He has been retired since 1934, when he last had his own cabinetmaking store in the rear of his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagner recall many interesting experiences in their married life. The blizzard of 1888 is recalled by Mr. Wagner, who remembered snow drifts 15 feet in height. A train was snow-bound for five days between Harrisburg and Carlisle, so high was the snow piled. The Johnstown flood also brings back memories.

Schools today are much better than in their day, the couple contend. No handicap of walking miles to school, followed by hard farm work in the afternoon, is thrust upon children today. Kerosene lamps were used frequently, and earlier beef and fat candles were popular. Mrs. Wagner upon many occasions made the candles at home. They also recalled the first auto, run on kerosene and the thrill everyone got from a ride in one.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagner are the parents of six children, three of whom are living. They include: Mrs. Bertha Bush of Long Green; Mrs. Ella Pearl Reynolds, of Mount Holly, N. J., and Mrs. Frances Moutbough, of York, Pa. They have 15 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren, and have four generations in their family.

PHILADELPHIA, June 15—More than 16,000 gallons of anti-freeze solution were distributed by a tri-state bootleg ring in 1935 to speakeasies in Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey, for sale as potable alcohol, according to testimony before the U. S. district court today. The testimony was given at the trial of ten alleged members of the ring who have been indicted on charges of defrauding the government of nearly $500,000 in liquor taxes by their operations three years ago.

Witnesses asserted the ring purchased the anti-freeze solution from reputable firms and diverted it to taprooms without the knowledge of the companies involved.

Portrait of A TYPICAL TELEPHONE MAN

Calling at a home to fix a telephone, one of our Installer-Repairmen found this note:

To the Telephone Man: The key is in the mailbox. Be careful of the kittens so they don't get out. The food near the 'phone is for the dog. His name is Bobby. He won't bother you if you feed him. Thanks!

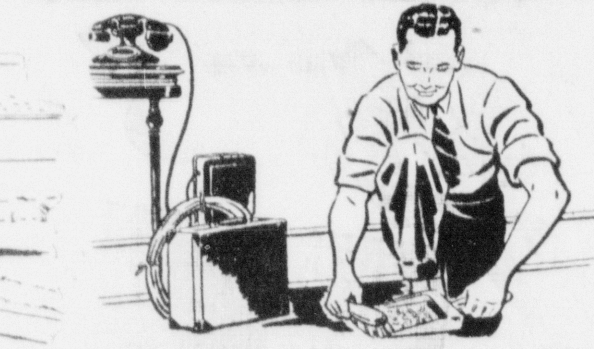

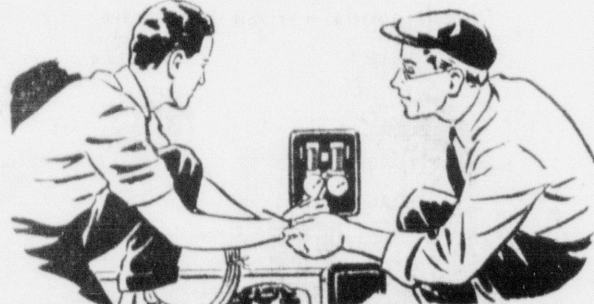

This note is typical of the confidence which most people have in "the telephone man." One day he is given the key of the house. The next day, he may work in a bank, surrounded by thousands of dollars in cash.

Wherever he goes, people welcome him, with complete confidence in his careful workmanship and his integrity.

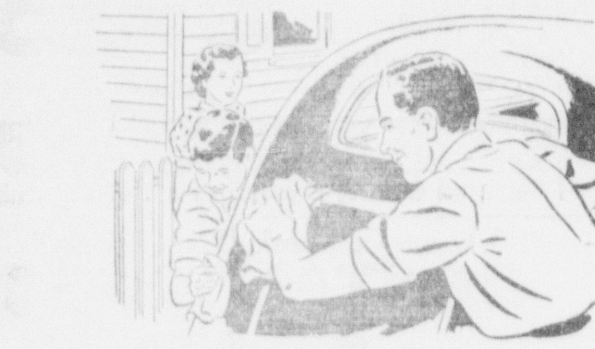

There are almost 1,500 Installers and Repairmen in this company. They play a mighty big part in giving Pennsylvania a telephone service that is second to none.

Following are some interesting facts and figures about these men, based on a recent survey.

THEY STARTED YOUNG—at the average age of 19—and have had 16 years of telephone service—which makes their average age today around 35. They average 5 feet 9 inches tall; weigh 165 lbs. Almost all had attended high school before they joined this company. Some went to college.

ON THE JOB, they take a real pride in giving the kind of service our customers want. Installations and repairs are made promptly, with the convenience of the customer always in mind. These men are as careful of your property as if it were their own. Their neat, orderly, quiet workmanship has brought us hundreds of letters of praise.

NINE OUT OF TEN of these men are married and have children. Half of them own their own homes and eight out of ten have a car (most common are 1935 sedans). Many of them have driven Bell Telephone cars for five or ten years without an accident. More than one-third own a few shares of telephone stock. Two-thirds belong to one or more fraternal groups.

MOST OF these men are keenly interested in all sports, but like baseball, football and basketball best. Their hobbies are hunting and fishing, photography and woodwork. They like Wallace Bery and Myrna Loy in the movies; Jack Benny on the radio. Favorite author is Lloyd C. Douglas.

IT MEANS A GREAT DEAL when the Installer finishes his job and says, "You are connected!" It means that you're connected to every Bell telephone in town and to millions of other telephones all over the world. It means that you're in touch with your friends and with social and business opportunities. It means that you can reach almost anyone, anywhere, any time . . . quickly, easily, at low cost.

You are cordially invited to visit the Bell System Exhibit at the New York World's Fair

LANGHORNE

At the Children's Day service at the Methodist Church last Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. Walter F. Humphrey, administered baptism to the following children: Beverly Lucille Brick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Lamon Brick; Thelma Sibilla Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Miller, Myrna Kay Speck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Speck; Ronald Edward Goheen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Goheen.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Baker, Chambersburg, are spending a week with their daughter, Mrs. Lester Kaufman.

The annual picnic of the Methodist Church School will be held at Forest Grove Park, Chalfont, June 24th.

Rodman P. Reeder is home from Columbia University for the summer vacation.

ON THE SCREENS

RITZ THEATRE

Gene Autry, who has built up an enviable reputation riding herd, round-up rustlers and singing and playing on his "gee-tar," now has ridden far afield to seek his cinematic fortunes in the Far North! "Blue Montana Skies," Republic western which opened last night at the Ritz Theatre presents Gene as a cattle man who journeys into Canada to outwit a gang engaged in smuggling white fox furs.

BRISTOL THEATRE

With a cast studded with brilliant stars, and a story of breathless speed and excitement, "Stagecoach" rode into the Bristol Theatre last night for its local premiere. As well as the talents of nine featured players and a novel and arresting theme, "Stagecoach" has the advantages of an excellent screenplay by Dudley Nichols, masterful direction of John Ford, and the usual place and authenticity that distinguish a Walter Wanger production.

RECIPES: Those Which Interest Women

Cold Meat Platter For Buffet Meal

Wide Assortment of Cold Cuts
Can Be Arranged With Artistic Skill

For the hostess who wishes to entertain a larger group of friends than her dining room can comfortably accommodate, the fashion of serving buffet meals solves a problem. The food can be attractively arranged on a long table, then carried to small tables set up where most convenient, possibly in the living room or, in summer time, upon the porch. The food can be prepared well ahead of time, and the guests do part of the serving themselves. Both of these features are an aid to the homemaker who does most of the work herself.

A buffet service can be very pretty. Linens, silver, china, flowers, candles, all contribute their beauty to the picture. And the food itself of course should be well worth its lovely setting.

Remember that the appetites of the guests must be satisfied, says Inez S. Willson, home economist, and that the food must be as tasty as it is decorative. See to it that the menu is well balanced. Have all the little "extras" you desire, but also serve food that will really satisfy as well as tempt. This is especially desirable if there are men in your party.

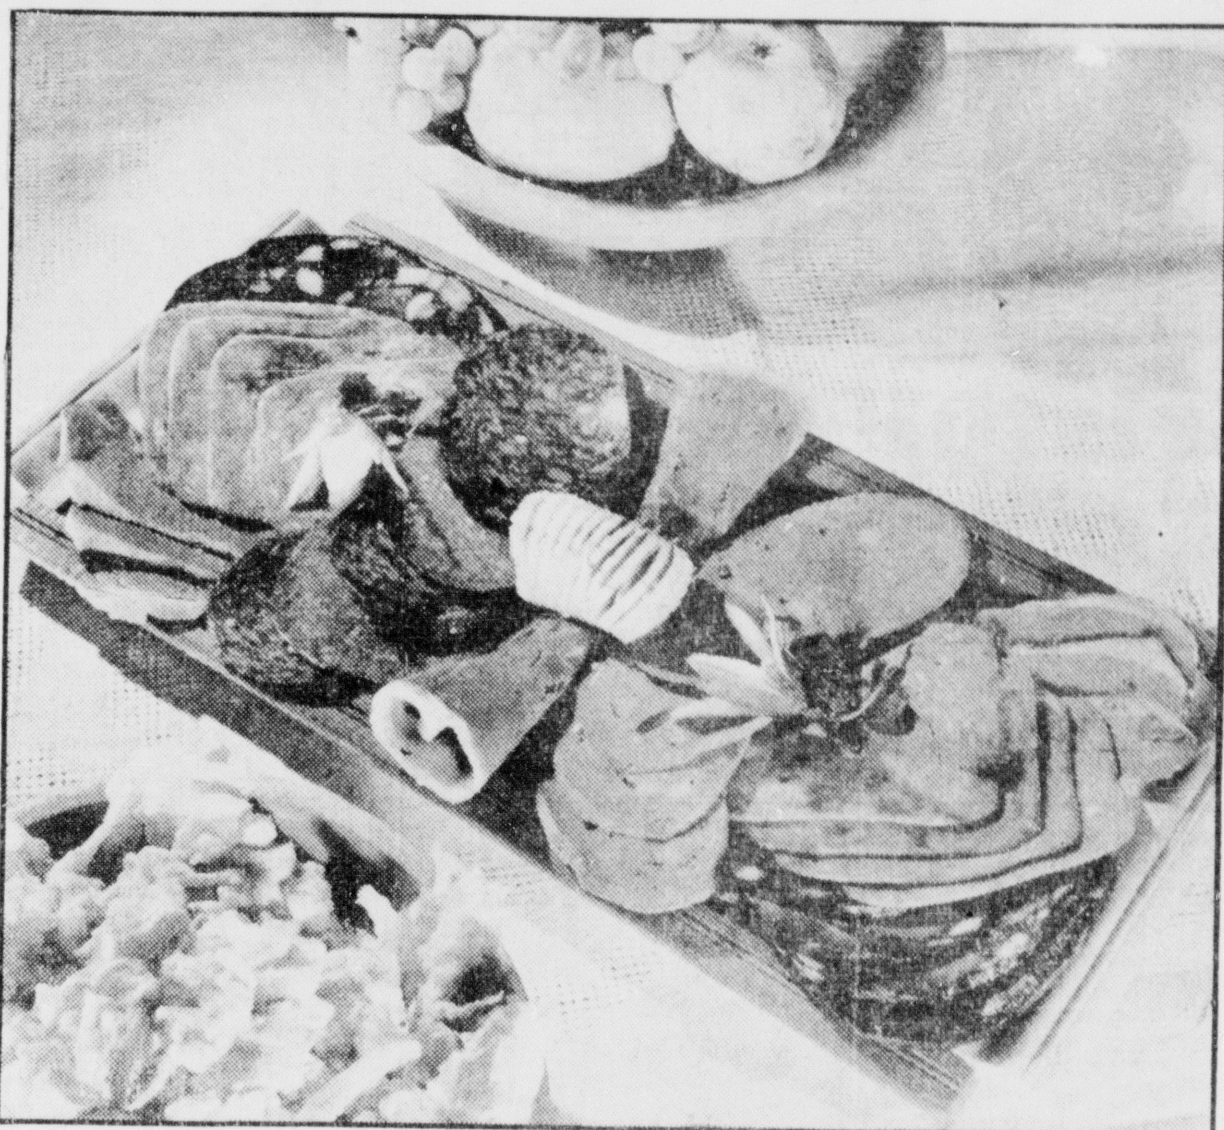

A platter of assorted cold meats and one hot dish, such as a creamed vegetable, will serve as a good basis for your buffet meal. See that this hot dish does not contain too much liquid. Escalloped potatoes or corn are good selections. Or perhaps you will want to serve a tempting potato salad. A gelatin salad of vegetables or fruits fits in well, also, and is easy to serve. Dessert and a beverage will complete the feast. With the cold meat, you may serve slices of buttered bread so that the guests can make sandwiches if they wish.

Round Steak In Tempting Guise

Steaks from the round of beef are among the finest cuts for satisfying meals. They are appetizing and nutritious and they can be prepared in a variety of tempting ways.

While individual steaks cut from the round may be broiled as are sirloin, T-bone and porterhouse, usually round steak is cooked by braising. This slow cooking in moist heat makes the meat deliciously tender.

COLD MEAT PLATTER FOR SUMMER

As with pot-roasts, which are also examples of meats cooked by braising, this method of cooking round steak permits a variety in flavors, either by the addition of spices or the different kinds of liquids used. Also it offers a fine chance for cooking meat and vegetables together, thus extending the flavor of the meat to the other foods.

Here are ways of cooking round steak which may be new to you. They are recommended by Inez S. Willson, home economist:

Swiss Steak

This is a round steak cut 1 to 1½ inches thick and braised. Pound flour into the steak, brown in hot lard, cover with 1 cup tomatoes and cook in a slow oven (300-350 degrees F.) until done, about 1½ hours. Sliced onion or carrots may be added after browning.

Deviled Round Steak

Make a sauce of 4 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoon grated onion, 3 teaspoons melted butter or bacon drippings and 4 tablespoons chili sauce. Rub steak well with mustard, then let it stand in the sauce for an hour before cooking. Cover and cook slowly in a moderate oven until done.

Round Steak With Cheese

Have steak cut thick. After browning in hot lard, add 2 onions, sliced, one-half cup water and one-half cup sour cream to which 2 tablespoons of grated cheese have been added. Cover and cook slowly.

Spiced Steak

After browning, season with one-half bay-leaf and 5 or 6 whole cloves; serve well-known meat cuts, suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist. Use them to give the family meal a bit of style.

Veal Cutlets, Hawaiian

6 thick veal cutlets
6 slices pineapple
1 cup bread crumbs
1 egg
1 tablespoon milk
Salt and pepper

Cut a pocket or a slit lengthwise in each cutlet and insert a slice of pineapple. Dip the cutlets in egg beaten in milk, then in bread crumbs. Brown in hot lard, then cover and cook very slowly until the cutlets are tender, about thirty minutes. Serve with additional slices of pineapple browned in butter.

Sausage Patties

1½ pounds pork sausage
½ cup uncooked rice
½ cup cream or top milk
1 cup tomato puree
Flour
1 tablespoon green pepper, chopped

New Meat Dishes To Vary Menus

Are you an adventurer at heart, liking new things, or do you cling to the well-known, the safe and sure? Can you start a bit of excitement yourself, or must you wait until someone else takes the lead?

Do you know that your character is expressed in your cooking? It is, definitely. And if you don't want to be the colorless, uninteresting personality your hum-drum menus indicate, give yourself a "lift" and give the meals you serve sparkle and zest by trying a new recipe at least once a week.

Here are new and tasty ways to

¼ onion, chopepd
1 cup hot water

Mix the pork sausage, uncooked rice, onion, green pepper and cream. Form into balls or patties. Roll in flour and place in a buttered baking dish. Cover with tomato puree, which is diluted with 1 cup boiling water. Cover the dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for one and a half hours. If necessary, add more hot water as baking with uncooked rice absorbs the liquid. If desired, a gravy may be made by adding more hot liquid and thickening with flour smoothed in cold water, using 2 tablespoons for 1 cup of liquid. Return to the oven and cook until the liquid is thickened.

LOOK TO SAFETY IN BUYING OF ITEMS ADDING TO BEAUTY

By Miss Edna Stephany

Home Economics Representative
America's first cosmetic law passed in Pennsylvania in the year 1770 stated that any marriage can be annulled if the wife during courtship misleads and deceives her prospective husband by the use of cosmetics.

Contraband under that law, the use of powdered chalk, fresh-cut beetroots, and rose petals persisted nevertheless, until finally the gathering weight of custom and usage succeeded in pushing the first cosmetic law into the limbo of forgotten things.

Consumers spent 384 million dollars last year for their toilet requisites, and this figure does not include money spent for soaps or dental preparations.

When an industry gets that large it begins to have problems. Manufacture and sale of cosmetics, like the manufacture and sale of foods and drugs, have come to be recognized as being intimately bound up with the public health. Defective foods, defective drugs, or defective cosmetics are hazardous to the public health. Food and drug laws are a recognition of this.

Banned now from interstate commerce by the new Federal law are all adulterated and misbranded cosmetics. Any cosmetic is adulterated and therefore illegal:

(1) if it contains any substance which may be harmful when used according to label directions;

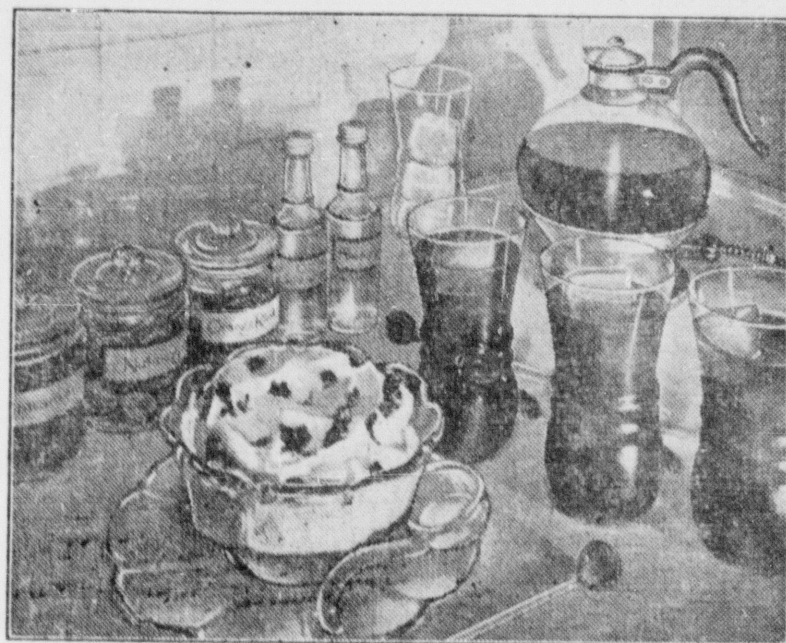

(2) if it contains any substance which may be harmful if used under such conditions as are customary or usual;

(3) if it contains any filthy, putrid or decomposed substance; (4) if it has been prepared, packed, or held under conditions which might have contaminated it or rendered it injurious;

(5) if its container contains any substance which might make the contents injurious to health;

(6) if it contains a coal tar dye that has not been certified as safe by the Food and Drug Administration. Coal tar hair dyes, however, are excepted

Iced Coffee Rates "Tops" for Holiday

Tip-top are toppings for iced coffee—snowy whipped cream flavored with one of the toothsome ingredients shown here—an ideal new way to celebrate National Iced Coffee Week, June 25-July 1. Learn how to make it, below!

TAKE off your hat to iced coffee, for it gets a "topper" of whipped cream "supreme" and a holiday all its own at last! Served hot, coffee has long been the real American beverage. Now the frosty, iced variety gets top honors for summer, and is voted a seven-day holiday of its own, National Iced Coffee Week—June 25th to July 1st.

Want the secret of making honest-to-goodness iced coffee? It's easy as enjoying yourself: make the coffee fresh, and double-strength, then pour it hot, right over plenty of ice in tall glasses. Serve it quick—and often!

TIP-TOP TOPPERS

For a real treat, put a "hat" on your iced coffee—of flavored whipped cream. That makes it "Coffee Supreme" and no wonder! Into the whipped cream just fold one of the ingredients listed here:

Cinnamon Iced Coffee: cinnamon and nutmeg.

Mint Iced Coffee: few drops oil of spearmint.

Southern Iced Coffee: grated orange rind.

Chocolate Iced Coffee: grated chocolate or chocolate syrup.

Almond Iced Coffee: few drops almond extract.

from some of the prohibitions of the law. They may contain coal tar dyes, for example, which have not been certified. But if they do, they must carry a warning on their label. This warning must read: "Caution—this product contains ingredients which may cause skin irritation on certain individuals and a preliminary test according to accompanying instructions should first be made. This product must not be used for dyeing the eyelashes or eyebrows. To do so may cause blindness." Hair dye does not include eyelash dye or eyebrow dyes.

Misbranding is more directly concerned with the protection of consumer purses rather than of consumer health. Under the Federal law cosmetics are misbranded (1) if their labels are false or misleading in any way; (2) if packages containing them do not give the name and place of business of the manufacturer, packer, or distributor, and the weight, measure, or numerical count of the contents; (3) if any information which is required on the label is not given in such terms and placed prominently enough to be read and understood; (4) if the container is made, formed, or filled so as to be misleading.

But a Federal law is no be-all and end-all. Federal law does not reach to cosmetics made and sold within the boundaries of a single State. Neither are the cosmetics manufacturers and distributors required to tell consumers what they are paying for. The Federal law does not require the listing of ingredients on cosmetic labels.

LONDON—(INS)—Plans were being rushed through today to reinforce the House of Commons as a protection against possible air raids. All other government buildings, comprising Whitehall, already have been protected. During the past few months hundreds of tons of steel girders, concrete and bricks have been taken into the basements of the government offices.

Solving Hard Water Problem

By Katharine Fisher

Director of Good Housekeeping Institute

What a blessing it is to have at one's command a plentiful supply of water—to know that at the turn of the tap clear, sparkling water will gush forth, good to the taste and suitable for every requirement of cleanliness. "As right as rain," as the old saying goes. It is not until we have had to use water which has some undesirable quality that we begin to give the matter any real thought.

KATHARINE FISHER
Director of
Good Housekeeping
Institute

Hard water is the cause of frequent complaint. It is the reason for that sticky scum which collects on the dishpan, the dishwashing machine, the bathtub, etc. It is caused by minerals which the water dissolves as it comes into contact with them in its passage through the ground. These minerals are commonly lime and magnesium.

Laundrying with hard water is troublesome, too. When soap is added to hard water it combines with the minerals and is destroyed. Enough soap must be added to satisfy all the hardness before a lather can be formed. The soap used up in this way is wasted and forms a sticky curd that adheres to clothes washed in the water, causing them, when dry, to be harsh to the touch. The curd also causes the clothes to turn gray and sometimes to acquire an odor.

When you bathe with hard water, the sticky curd takes away from the pleasure of the bath and the feeling of exquisite cleanliness that follows a bath in soft water. The scum that forms also leaves around the bathtub a sticky ring that is not easily removed. Shampooing the hair with soap and hard water is just as troublesome, as it leaves the hair sticky and dull-looking instead of clean, soft and lustrous.

Hard water also affects the flavor and texture of foods, like peas and beans; and if such water is used for making tea and coffee, some of the flavor of these beverages will be lost. One of the best known examples of what happens when hot water is heated is the deposit of scale which clings tenaciously to the bottom and sides of a tea kettle. This scale also presents difficulties in the hot water supply system. It is a poor conductor of heat, causes the water heater to burn out, and also clogs the hot-water piping.

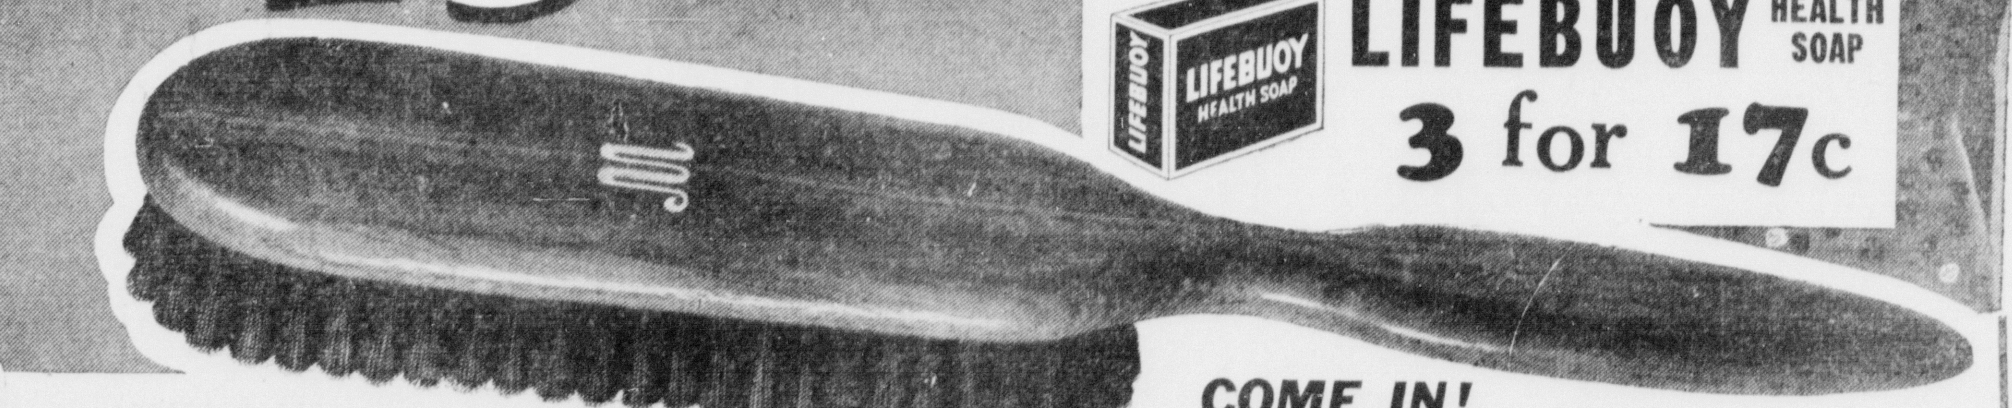

When the water supply is extremely hard, rain water is often caught and stored in cisterns. While it is true that rain water, as it comes from the clouds, is relatively soft and free from minerals, in most cases stored rain water acquires an appreciable amount of hardness from the walls of the cistern. Furthermore, rain water flowing over a roof washes the dirt from it, and in spite of measures to correct this, the cistern is apt to be a dirt trap.

Hard water difficulties can be eliminated in home today by the installation of a zeolite water softener. Such a softener will completely remove all the lime and magnesium salts and convert the water into one that has no hardness. A zeolite water softener consists of a tank which contains the zeolite mineral. This tank is connected to the house piping; after flowing through the zeolite the water leaves the tank and then flows to the faucets from which it is to be used. The zeolite lasts indefinitely, but every week or two, after a certain amount of water has been softened, it must be reconditioned by flushing with a solution of pure table salt. This reconditioning is easily accomplished by almost any member of the family when a hand operated water softener is used. In the automatic type of water softener, the reconditioning is done by an electric motor which is started by a hand switch, or by a time clock, or a water meter. The only attention required for the automatic type is to load the brine tank with salt at infrequent intervals.

DI RENZO SOFTBALL TEAM WINS OVER SUPERIOR ZINC

In a long and thrilling game witnessed by one of the largest crowds ever to witness a community softball game, the DiRenzo team defeated the Zinc Works team to the tune of 9-7.

Joe Peterpaul, making assists and put-outs from all angles of the field, was the main feature of the game. He also got two singles. Girotti pitched an air tight ball game. He helped his team out with two hits.

Pat, the snappy catcher for the Zinc Smelters, got himself a barrage of base hits one a tremendous home run.

"SQUIB" HITS OF "ODDIES" NET THEM CLOSE VICTORY

Two "squib" hits by the Odd Fellows netted them a close 3-1 victory over the Hall Aluminum team last evening on the Grundy field. The hits helped the winners to score the second and third markers of the frame.

The tilt was a hurling match between Jake Praul and William White. Praul was found for five bingles while the winners collected six from the delivery of White.

Three of the airplane workers' safe snacks were registered in the third to score their run. The Oddies bunched four in the second to count three times. The winning hit was a short fly to right which Sagolla got his hands on but could not hold.

Sagolla made two nice fielding plays in the fifth and sixth to stop more rallies threatened by the Oddies.

The triumph put the Radcliffe street team in third place, one-half game from the second place Diamond team and a full game away from the league-leading Rohm and Haas team.

DIAMOND NINE TOPPLED FROM THE LEAGUE LEAD

The Diamond team was toppled from its post at the head of the Bristol Twilight League last evening on the Maple Beach diamond as "Reds" Gallagher pitched his second shutout of the season in hurling the Rohm and Haas nine to a 6-0 win over the City Line boys.

Two hits was the limit allowed by the carrot-headed twirler to the Diamond batsmen and both were beat-out slow rollers to third and second. Reds fanned nine batters and in the fifth fanned the side.

Although victory was certain for the chemical workers they also turned in several fielding gems. Holland made a beautiful catch of Purcell's fly with two on base in the sixth and Helveston was robbed of a hit in the third by a good play on the part of Locke.

PROFY'S TEAM DRENCHES THE FIRE DEP'T BOYS

Behind the six-hit pitching of 'Petie' Court the Profy's team rang out 26 hits for a grand total of 26 runs against the firemen.

Joe Clallia led the Profy team with six for six trips to the plate. The best for the B. F. D. was gotten by Petrina, who got two hits with three trips to the plate.

SPEEDS AT LANGHORNE TO BE REVIEWED BY BOARD

Speeds attained July 4 in the 250 Mile All American Stock Car Race on the fast Langhorne Speedway will be reviewed by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association for listing in the world's record book. It was announced by Hankinson Speedways, sponsor.

So important is this race, open to the everyday motorist, that expensive electrical timing apparatus such as used at the Indianapolis Speedway will be installed at Langhorne to clock the cars for international speed recognition.

The A. A. A. Contest Board lists the fastest records of all time according to the size of stock car engines and the distance. The electrical timing device is in constant operation during an event and speeds will be checked all along the line.

The existing stock car records range from the peak of 104 miles per hour to 62 miles per hour, for the smallest class. A stock Auburn Speedster holds the 104 mile-per-hour mark for one mile, the distance around the Langhorne Speedway.

If record speeds are attained at Langhorne—which the racing experts predict will happen—the faster galls will go into the A. A. A. books, speed officials said.

In addition to an opportunity for international recognition through new records, the entrants will share a purse of at least $5,500.

The race is open to every man 21 years of age and over. Cars eligible are models of 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1940.

PRaises LONG SESSION

PARIS—(INS)—In the first "public appearance" of the idea, the newspaper "Le Temps" recently editorialized for the prolongation of the present session of the Chamber of Deputies on the grounds that the international situation was such that France should not weaken her internal position by hithering with the elections due next year. The idea has rolled from many political tongues for several months. It will probably succeed unless international tension recedes.
